Free Mini Law School: What is Legal Education?

This Spring, the University of Colorado Law School is thrilled to offer a brand-new program: What is Legal Education? Best of all, this four-week series is completely free for all participants. Designed with future law students in mind, this opportunity is perfect for anyone curious about pursuing legal education. For individuals applying to law school, this accessible program provides invaluable insights into the foundations of legal study, and all of the doors that open with a legal education.

JusticeCorps Internships

Los Angeles JusticeCorps members are trained to support self-represented litigants navigating their cases without an attorney. If accepted into the program, you will be placed in one of the courthouses throughout LA and work under the direct supervision of an attorney to offer legal assistance (not advice) to the many members of the LA community navigating a court case on their own.

Students of all majors and career interests are welcomed! Prospective JusticeCorps participants are not required to be interested in pursuing a legal career, have a specific major, or have any experience in law, teaching, or working with the public.

If you want to develop transferable skills, are interested in giving back to your community, serving a population that is in need, or promoting social justice, JusticeCorps will provide you with a unique opportunity to do so!

LA Justice Corps offers 3 positions: Graduates Fellows, Legal Access Intern, and Summer Program Legal Access Interns, each with their own level of commitment and eligibility requirements.

Priority Deadline: Monday, February 17, 2025.
